WILL WORK TO GET FREE TRADE

ed for two decades before the Stars and Stripes were raised over your soil. During the fiscal year 1908, the United States imported duty-paying sugar to the amount of 1,685,998 tons of 2000 pounds. Only 19,204 tons came from the Philippines. Cuba supplied 1,154,394 tons; and foreign, bounty-aided competitors, 512,290 tons. The American agent of American commerce in the Orient and he is entitled to his commission. In asking a fair advantage over his bounty-free foreign competitor, his request seems modest enough.

"Remember that prior to American occupation of the Philippines, the islands enjoyed the full benefit of the markets of Spain. The planter was sure of a ready sale for all the sugar he could produce and allied industries thrived. We have closed these markets and it is up to us to replace them by our own. We must do this, or see the islands languish under our very eyes without putting out a hand to help them.

"As to the moral aspect of the question there can be no argument. Congress has a duty to perform and when the question is presented as it will be by capable Philippine business advocates now on their way to the capital, the bottom will be knocked out of the opposition tub. The real opposition to free trade with the Philippines comes, in the United States, from the best sugar producers, whose total production does not amount to one-sixth the amount of duty-paying imported sugar. Now, when they say that the free admission of Philippine sugar will spell disaster for the twelve states in which they operate, the speciousness of this argument is apparent.

"From the American point of view, it is a little thing we ask. From the Philippine point of view, it is a question of industrial life or death. And the Philippine planter puts it up to you in his hour of need to play the game. 'I say it will pay you to help us. It will. The presence of the Buford at this wharf is an exemplar of one of the advantages derived by Honolulu from American occupation of the Philippines. As the years roll on, there are bound to arise many matters of kindred interest where we can help you and you can help us. A reciprocal policy of this sort seems more business-like than one of dog-in-the-manger selfishness."

Mr. Sellner does not favor the 200,000 tons limit bill. He says Mr. C. B. Wells, a Hawaiian sugar planter, exploded that mythical benefit bubble when he was in Manila some time ago. Mr. Sellner quoted Mr. Wells as saying: "Large sugar interests will never come to the Philippines under a limitation of 400,000 tons [that was the figure then set] free import into the United States. Such a limitation will prove a most effective barrier in discouraging capital that might come here, if as in Hawaii, unlimited free export was allowed. As in Hawaii as soon as it was proclaimed a territory, so here, were free trade proclaimed with the United States, I believe that capital would at once turn in this direction and millions be invested."

Mr. Sellner says there is no reason why Congress should put a limit on Philippine free sugar. "Nature has done that," he says; "the land suitable for cane is limited."

"But, given a fair chance, it will boost American capital into the islands; and capital is our main need. The 200,000 limit proposed will keep capital away; and, as Mr. Harold M. Pitt points out, 'Our revenues from customs will be reduced through United States products coming in free and supplanting duty-paying imports from other countries, while industry will not receive benefits enabling an increase in internal taxes equivalent to the loss.'"

McGovern on Free Trade.

Chauncey McGovern, one of the press agents of the Constabulary band, who is known all over the Orient, an hor of "Sergeant Larry" and "By Bolo and Krag," is an enthusiastic advocate of free trade for the Philippines. He wants the restrictions taken off American goods so that American manufactured goods may be imported into the Philippines as they are into Hawaii, without duty. They also want the duty taken off Philippine-produced sugar. Mr. McGovern argues that the removal of the duty on the sugar will not affect the sugar produced in the Hawaiian Islands.

The present output in the Philippines is sold mainly in Oriental countries, and particularly China, and the rate of increase in production will never be so large that it will compete with the mainland markets for Hawaiian sugar, but will still go to China, only at New York quotations, which price will be paid by Oriental consumers. The consumption of sugar in the United States is so large that the importations are extremely large from other countries.

Mr. McGovern feels that the relief from duty on Philippine sugar, the increased revenues to planters from their output, will lead to better trade with the United States, and that Hawaii will be the gainer. He anticipates that more ships will call at Honolulu, bringing more people to our doors.

At present the Philippines procures four-fifths of its cotton supplies from foreign countries because the duty on American goods is the same and the channels of trade have led elsewhere previously. Every European country derives greater trade benefits from the Philippines than the United States. The taking of the Philippines by American forces caused the bulk of trade to be taken from Spain and diverted to other countries, mainly of Europe. Millions that now go to purchase supplies in foreign countries would be diverted to the United States by the withdrawal of the duty on imported American goods.

Mr. McGovern has had an interesting experience in the Philippines. As a newspaper man, he was arrested for libel, but he says that in the old days, the "days of the Empire," a newspaper man was not "roughly so unless he had been arrested for libel and imprisoned, or at least sentenced. Very often they did not know that they had violated any particular law until they found they had run up against a section of Spanish law. Mr. McGovern was sentenced to four months' imprisonment at hard labor.

"But no American sent to Bilbil prison ever has hard work imposed on him by the director," said Mr. McGovern yesterday. "I was in a couple of weeks when a big petition was sent to the Governor-General to pardon me. It was arranged that I should be pardoned Christmas day. It was made out, but right at the end was a single line on condition that I pay a fine of $1000 gold. I did not pay the money, and stayed in two months. While in Bilbil, I wrote 'Py Bolo and Krag.'"
